Mokena Women's Service Club To Open Bond Drive

The Mokena Women's Service Club, who are sponsoring the 7th War Loan Drive, will begin their local canvass this week. Every home in the village will be called upon by one of the workers, and it is suggested that you discuss the amount of bonds you intend to subscribe for before the workers call upon you. This will save a great deal of time for the worker and also save the necessity of more than one call at the same household.

The Treasury Department has announced that the goal will be 14 billion dollars, and of this amount, 7 billion dollars must be obtained from individuals. This is the largest quota ever assigned to this class of investor. There are eight securities offered in the 7th War Loan Drive; however, the Series E Bond is the best purchase for the average investor.

Mr. Lawrence Kohl will act as Chairman of the farm district for the North half of Frankfort township, and his committee will also make a house to house canvass.

In connection with the 7th War Loan Drive, there will be an exhibit of souvenirs and items of interest at the Mokena State Bank which have been sent home by the boys in service. It will be greatly appreciated if people who have such items will leave them at the Mokena State Bank for this display.

TRADE YOUR FOLDING MONEY FOR FIGHTING MONEY

Letters to the Editor

New Lenox has voted on incorporation and altho the issue was defeated at this time it made a fine showing. One can hardly consider it other than a trial balloon. In the beginning it was doomed to defeat. History shows that people are afraid of new things. The issue was defeated mostly by our good citizens because they didn't know what it was all about and had no one to tell them otherwise. When incorporation was started little interest was shown by any of us. We gave the committee little help and they gave us little information or a definite program. In spite of this it made a good showing and the committee should be congratulated for their efforts. Let's keep the issue going. Why not start an educational program and tell the people the good points of incorporation. There must be something good about it that we don't know about or our neighboring towns wouldn't have it. I'll bet you couldn't take it away from them. They have street lights, city water and black top roads. Why shouldn't we have them?

It is to be regretted that during our struggle over the issue that five or six of our citizens found it necessary due allegedly to jealousy and not being able to run the show, stooped to tactics of so called underground, passing out obnoxious circulars during the black of night. Shame on you, and several of you supposedly up and coming businessmen.

Fortunately the circulars did more good than harm. It created an interest and made a lot of friends for incorporation. A lot of us got busy and checked on incorporation and found it better than we thought, therefore giving a bigger vote for it then expected.

A New Lenox Citizen

The outcome of the first election on incorporation in New Lenox was very encouraging. The vote was only 46 short of the necessary majority. 472 cast ballots Saturday May 5th which was about ninety percent of the voters in the area. The only excitement that interrupted the peaceful election occurred when the plate glass window in the door to Otto Bormet's Service Station was pushed out. The voter whose arm went through the glass attempted to open the door outward instead of pulling it inward when he left the polling place.

The New Lenox Incorporating Committee thanks all who showed their faith in the integrity of their fellow residents by voting for incorporation. The committee also thanks those who took an active part in the effort to bring betterment to the community.

At a special meeting of the committee for incorporation plans were made for another election one year from now which is the earliest permitted by law. Some changes in the committee are planned as a result of experience gained in the past few months. These changes will be largely along the lines of enlarging its program and expanding its active membership. The aim of its program will be educational and its emphasis will be directed toward the immediate benefits to be obtained from incorporation.

The committee also plans to increase the area to be incorporated as a result of many requests received from people living outside of the limits originally decided upon. The new area will keep the same

How Mokena Celebrated Armistice Day In 1918

This is the way Mokena celebrated Armistice Day Nov. 11, 1918 when the above group of Mokena children bedecked themselves in costume and carrying flags and paraded thru the streets of the village. Mrs. Wm. Semmler took this picture of them when they went by her home, but did not write down the names of the participants at the time. Anyone knowing who these children are, please convey that information to The News-Bulletin.

INCORPORATION ADVOCATE

St. Jude's Scene of Pretty Wedding

At a very pretty nuptial service performed Sunday morning at 11 o'clock in St. Jude's Catholic church, New Lenox, Miss Catherine Kamus, daughter of Mrs. B. A. Banning of Chicago became the bride of Anthony Gartner, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Gartner of New Lenox.

Rev. Father Reynold Klaes officiated at the double ring ceremony. He was assisted by the Rev. Father Neallis, pastor of the St. Joseph church in Manhattan. James Brooks served the nuptial high mass. Huge baskets and vases of white lilies and white Carnations, decorated the altar.

Given in marriage by her brother Felix Kamus, the bride wore the traditional white, and entered the church to the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march. Preceding the ceremony the church choir sang, "On This Day O Beautiful Mother." Her gown was of heavy white satin fashioned with a formal neckline, fitted bodice that buttoned down the back to the waist line. The long tight fitting sleeves came to a point at the wrist. She wore an extremely long train with a finger tip veil held in place with a pearl tiara. Her cascade bouquet was of white lilies and Orange Blossoms, and she carried a white prayer book. Her only jewelry was a pearl necklace, a gift of the groom.

Miss Hilda Kurtz was the maid of honor and she wore an aqua marine chiffon gown fashioned with a sweet heart neckline, tight fitting shirred bodice and short puff sleeves. Her matching gloves were elbow length and her blusher veil was held in place with yellow daisies. Her cascade bouquet was made up of yellow daisies and blue lilies.

Little Barbara Perlick was the flower girl. Her colonial bouquet was made up of sweetheart roses, astors and baby lilies. Hans Gartner was best man for his brother.

Ushers were Fred Brooks and Donald Wilson.

The bride's mother wore an aqua marine crepe dress with black accessories and a corsage of orchids. The groom's mother wore a black sheer dress with matching accessories and a corsage of orchids.

Following the ceremony a wedding dinner was served to 65 relatives and friends in the church dining room. An open house reception was held during the evening in the church dining room. The long table was covered with a white linen cloth and centered with a three tiered wedding cake that was topped with a miniature bride and groom. Bouquets of flowers also decorated the table and dining room.

When the newlyweds departed on a short wedding trip the new bride was attired in a powder blue suit with navy accessories and she wore a corsage of orchids. The bride was formerly employed at the offices of Chas. F. Stevens department store in Chicago, and the bridegroom is in business with his father in Chicago.

The big two night show was climaxed Saturday night when the Frankfort Fire Dept. presented the Frankfort Minstrels of 1945.

The program opened with a flash back of the winning contestants and their numbers of the previous night. Following this the minstrel got under way. E. Gordon Stubbe was the interlocutor. The six men created a lot of merriment. The minstrel band provided peppy music. Among the stars of the minstrel show were four of Frankfort's own cute pinup girls impersonated by four members of the fire department.

Among the headliners were Shirley Gilice and Mr. and Mrs. Hyorns. Many of the old time songs were sung by the minstrel company. Another headliner was Frank Wilson room Oak Lawn, 70 years young who tap danced like a youth in the teen age. During the intermission Edward Balchowsky of Chicago, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Balchowsky entertained at the piano and also sang several solos.

The Rehfield Myer Post of Matteson presented the colors and Arthur Lambrecht presided at the mike as master of ceremonies. The Womans club of Frankfort awarded an afghan. The Prize went to Verle Rogers of Mokena.

Big Crowds at Church Services

Church bells ushered in V-E day Tuesday morning shortly after the proclamation by President Harry S. Truman came over the radio establishing the news as official that the Nazis had unconditionally surrendered.

There was no wild celebrating as marked the armistice day of 1918, but instead practically all business places closed for the day with the postoffices closing at noon. In the evening special church services in nearly all the churches in this section were held and all the services are reported to have been very largely attended.

This Sunday, May 13 is Mother's Day and in addition to this it will also be a special day of prayer as President Truman has requested the nation to observe and services in keeping with the day will be conducted in all the churches of this area. Be sure to go to church Sunday.

By the thread of one man's life hung personal relationships which affected nations. Prime ministers and potentates, once close to Franklin Roosevelt, now must learn how to get along with an unknown gentleman in the White House. Certain army-navy officials, who always knew how Roosevelt would react on this and that, now must do business with a man they once criticized.

To illustrate how the pendulum of fate has swung, here are some of those who will miss Franklin Roosevelt most:

WINSTON CHURCHILL — was able to call the late President on the telephone at any time night or day. Their relationship was more intimate than with most members of their own cabinets. When Churchill couldn't get Roosevelt, he talked to Harry Hopkins. Their friendship was equally close. Hopkins and Churchill used to stay up late at night sipping brandy long after FDR had gone to bed, and it was those late-hour talks that sometimes worried U. S. army-navy men. For vital policy sometimes was moulded after midnight.

Churchill had planned to hold national elections, probably in June, and Roosevelt's friendship would have been one of his great campaign assets. That asset is now out the window. Instead he must do business with a man he doesn't know and who chairmanned a committee whose members were quite critical of certain British lend-lease and international air policies abroad.

Some political observers believe that makes Churchill's political future very uncertain.

ADMIRAL ERNEST KING—The Commander of the Fleet and Chief of Naval Operations really ran the navy under Roosevelt, and he ran it with a high hand. He ignored the late Secretary Frank Knox whenever he felt like it, knowing he would get a sympathetic ear at the White House. He even overruled Knox on such a trivial matter as a gray-blue summer uniform for the navy, though Knox had decided it would cut too heavily into the consumption of textiles.

Knox's successor, Secretary of the Navy Forrestal, has played in with King. He had to. If King didn't agree with him, the admiral came out bluntly in press conference and said so.

But now there is a new man in the White House who wrote a caustic report bitterly critical of the way the admirals slowed up the war by failure to build adequate landing boats. The new President also did not hesitate to throw his hooks into the navy whenever the brass hats got inefficient, especially on their inexcusable procrastination in building destroyer-escort vessels. So fellow-admirals are watching to see just where King now sits.

GENERAL B. B. SOMERVELL—No army officer clashed with the Truman committee more frequently and more head-on than the tough-talking chief supply officer of the army. Somervell differed with Truman on all sorts of things, and the Truman committee reports are studied with criticism of the army's supply job.

Truman is not a man to nurse personal grudges and won't demote or transfer Somervell. General Marshall always maintained that despite mistakes he was the best man they had. But Somervell will never become chief of staff, or rise any higher in the army.

HARRY HOPKINS—Of all those around Roosevelt, Harry Hopkins will miss him most. Theirs was a very close personal relationship. Although Harry has been criticized vitriolically, sometimes even by other presidential intimates, FDR never wavered in his devotion. In a way, Harry took the place of Roosevelt's eldest son, Jimmie, whom he once hoped would be his secretary. So Harry will miss his old friend terribly.

The critics will say that Hopkins will miss him because of the glamour, the power and the prestige. But actually there was a love and devotion between the two men which few realized and even fewer understood.

Note—Several years ago, Roosevelt gave Hopkins permission to take notes on their discussions and write his memoirs. "You have no money, Harry," he said, "and you're foolish if you don't take notes on our conversations. You have my full permission to use them later." But Hopkins, always too busy, always engrossed with winning the Chief's next objective, never had time to take notes. He knows more about Roosevelt than any other living man, but most of the secrets will go with Hopkins to the grave.

BERNARD BARUCH—The man who talks with Presidents, no longer has the key to the White House. During the bitter battles between the War Production board civilian group and General Somervell's military clique, Baruch always backed up Somervell. In fact, he was one of Somervell's most vigorous supporters.

Truman, on the other hand, fought in the WPB civilian corner. Also Bernie was for Byrnes, not Truman, at the Chicago convention. So he may not be such a close friend to Presidents any more.

THE TRAGEDY OF THE
NORTHERN KINGDOM

LESSON TEXT—I Kings 12:26-30; 19:1-4, 13b-18; II Kings 17:7, 8.
GOLDEN TEXT—O magnify the Lord with me, and let us exalt His name together.—Psalm 34:3.

Nations as well as people come to crossroads in their history, and taking the wrong road then means future disaster. Solomon had built up a great national prosperity, but at the expense of heavy taxes. He had forgotten God, and was succeeded by a son who followed in his footsteps.

Offered an opportunity to ease the burden of the people (I Kings 12-14), Rehoboam in his folly made it greater, and the nation was divided. The ten northern tribes, which were henceforth to be known as Israel, followed Jeroboam, and the two southern tribes under Rehoboam became the kingdom of Judah.

Jeroboam started with God's favor, and might have led his people aright, but instead he became the king whose name stood for wickedness (see II Kings 15:18). The story of that downfall is a sad picture of unbelief and failure.

I. Religion Meets Politics (I Kings 12:26-30).

Jerusalem, now in the rival kingdom of Judah, was the center of Hebrew worship. While the people of Israel were free to go there to worship, Jeroboam saw that it might lead to their being led away from him. It was a shrewd political deduction, but it left God out of the picture.

He established new centers of worship, where calves of gold were set up. They were probably intended to be a symbol of God, but they bespeak the folly of mixing worldly things with the things of God. They become an abomination and a snare.

The people responded to the apparent interest of the king in their welfare, and worshiped at the most convenient place. Religion had met politics, and had let politics take the upper hand.

Someone has suggested that when we begin to find ways to make our religion easy, we can be certain that it is the enemy of our souls who is at work. When Satan begins to be solicitous about our welfare and suggest that it is too far to go to church, or that the weather is too cold (or too warm), etc., etc., we should be on guard.

Religious ease was a big step downward for Israel, and it can be for any other nation. Where does America stand in that important matter?

II. A Queen Meets a Prophet (I Kings 19:1-4, 13b-18).

Elijah under the mighty hand of God had defied the wicked king, Ahab, and his more wicked queen, Jezebel; yes, and all the prophets of Baal, and had been gloriously victorious (I Kings 18:17-41).

The queen, who was devilish in her wickedness and determination to destroy the worship of the true God, threatened the prophet. He who had met the challenge of the hundreds of prophets fled in fear before the relentless hatred of this venomous woman.

The prophet felt that all was lost, but God revealed to him that even in that dark day there were many who were still true to Him (v. 18). It is a precious and encouraging bit of light in an otherwise dark scene.

Our main interest in this lesson is not the experience of the prophet, but in seeing the cause of Israel's downfall. Here we see one great reason—every king of Israel was a wicked man. Some were better and some worse, but all of them forgot God.

A nation is on the downward path when its rulers forget God. What about our own nation? What about the elected representatives of the people? Do we choose men for public office because of their Christian faith and character, or on the basis of political expediency or affiliation?

III. A Nation Meets Its Doom (II Kings 17:7, 8).

The hour had struck when God's heavy hand of judgment had to fall on Israel, the northern kingdom of 10 tribes. Verse 6 of this chapter relates their carrying away into captivity to Assyria, and verses 7-9 tell us the reason for that judgment.

Ingratitude for God's blessing (v. 7) led to the worship of other gods (v. 8). They knew God's hatred for the sin of idolatry, and His judgment upon those who walked in that way, but they went right on.

Note in verse 9 that these things were done "secretly." "The same thing is true today of many who profess to be the people of God. The line of demarcation between the church and the world is not clearly drawn. We do well to note carefully the outcome of this course of procedure on Israel's part (vv. 6, 18). The fact that Israel did these things secretly did not hide them from the eyes of Jehovah (Ps. 139: 1, 2; Heb. 4:13)" (John W. Bradbury).

Kidney Action

Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—its risk of exposure and infection—throws heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become overtaxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling—feel constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass off harmful excess body waste. They have had more than half a century of public approval. Are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

THE STORY THUS FAR: Flicka's colt, long overdue, is born on Goose Bar ranch, high in the Rockies. Ken McLaughlin, Flicka's 12-year-old owner, is startled to see that the foal is white, and so a throwback to the Albino, the wild white stallion that is Flicka's grandsire. Next morning Colonel Harris and Charles Sargent, a millionaire horse breeder, are house guests. The colonel has brought his mare to be bred by Banner, Rob McLaughlin's stallion. Colonel Harris, Sargent and McLaughlin ride out to bring back Banner. The big red horse sees them at a distance, and runs over to his master. Banner then turns to drive the mare Harris is riding into his hand. The confused mare obeys Banner.

CHAPTER V

Rob and Charley caught sight of Harris's white face and the sound of a single profane shout as he swept past them. Leaning back like a steeple-chaser, he kept his seat and his knee-grip, leaving his body to whip pliantly from side to side. Any guidance or control of his mount was out of the question and he did not attempt it—merely held the reins and let her go.

Charley Sargent chuckled. "Even an artilleryman don't often take part in such a charge as that."

The mares disappeared over the crest of a rise and then, for a few moments, all that Rob and Charley could see was a cloud of dust above the mountainside.

Howard and Ken had the gates to the pasture open. The mares knew the way. As Banner got them close he slowed up. They made the turn. Presently the stable sergeant and the Colonel's orderly burst into exclamatory and profane speech which expressed their admiration and astonishment at the sight of the red stallion bringing the band of mares and colts at a headlong gallop down through the pasture and into the corral.

Gus closed the gates. Only then did the two soldiers see that their Colonel was in the band. He was dismounting from Taggart, straightening his hat with a hand that trembled slightly. His face was very white. Gus took the mare's bridle.

"Some ride!" he remarked, brushing himself off, for he was covered with dust and foam and bits of gravel. The orderly presented himself and saluted.

"Where's the mare?" asked Harris.

He might have saved himself the question, for Banner was already rearing and pawing at the gate of the eastern corral.

The men opened the gate and the stallion went in.

Charley and Rob rode down to the corral with innocent faces, and the Colonel met them, impassive, thoughtful as ever, his eyeglasses neatly on the bridge of his nose.

"You yelled something as you passed us," said Rob. "I didn't quite catch it."

The Colonel grinned. "You may not have heard—just as well you didn't. But you knew what I was saying all right. However, it's over now, and it's all right—it's all right!" he turned away grinning. "Quite an experience. I wouldn't have missed it."

"Makes you feel good now, Mort, don't it?" said Charley, "to be standing here in the corral, all safe and sound and on your own two legs, nice sunshine—dinner comin' up—"

"I must have been asleep at the switch when I let you two hand me that mare."

Ken and Howard arrived at a gallop and flung themselves off their horses. The Sergeant and orderly were blanketing the mare again and Banner was put back with his own mares by Tim.

Gus and Tim filled the feed boxes which stood on the ground near the corral fence with oats and the mares and colts began to feed.

There was nipping and kicking and some scrimmages. Rob supervised the process, his harsh voice quelling the disturbances. He had Banner's share of oats—a generous half-bucketful—in his hand, and the stallion would put his head in cautiously, his eyes looking up over the edge into Rob's face, then withdraw it and chew the oats, turning his head to watch the mares, then dip it in again and take another mouthful.

The process of covering his eyes and nose—upon which depended the safety of his mares—outraged his every instinct and he shook all over. Only his trust of Rob made it possible.

At last Rob dropped the bucket and told Tim to open the corral gates. "That's all," he said to Banner, "there isn't any more." He gently raised his arms and advanced toward the mares, as it were, pushing them before him.

"Take 'em back, Banner," he said to the stallion.

The band drifted slowly out through the gates and began to graze on the long lush grass beside the little stream.

"What'll they do now?" asked Harris.

"They'll hang around the corral for a while, grazing and thinking about oats. Then they'll work up through the pasture to the county road gate. It's open. They'll go through it and on up to the range again. Banner'll hold them together. Tim, keep a look-out. When they've all gone through the county road gate, close it."

"Yes sir." Ken saw his mother approaching. Now is the time, he thought—everything over and everybody here together—

The men grouped around the trailer, loading the Colonel's mare. The sergeant and orderly got into the front seat of the car and drove away with her.

The men stood watching a moment.

"Dad," said Ken.

"Well, son?"

"I've got a surprise for you."

"Sure enough?"

"I've been saving it since last night."

Everyone turned to look at him. He had their attention at last.

"It's in the stable," he added.

"Come and see it." He seized his father's arm and urged him through the corral gate.

Suddenly Rob guessed. "Not Flicka's colt?" he asked.

Ken nodded, beaming, his blue eyes shining with excitement.

"Yep!"

Rob explained to the others. "Ken's saddle mare should have foaled in the spring. She's been up here in the pasture all summer like

He looked at Ken—one of those blasting looks which Ken could not meet. Somehow, it was his fault.

Nell was studying the foal. It did not look like the Goose Bar colts. A newborn foal of pure breed is built on the perpendicular, its little back so short that all four legs seem to be in a close group underneath it—and the neck continues the perpendicular line, carried straight up to a small inquiring head like a sea-horse's. But this foal was built on the horizontal like a full-grown horse. It had a repellent look of precociousness and maturity, with its heavy neck and the big knobby head on the end of it, the large mouth with thick rather loose black lips, the short, uneven legs—

"Why," she exclaimed in a shocked voice, "it's a goblin!"

The blood rushed to Ken's head and made him dizzy. He went to the corral fence and took hold of the rails to steady himself.

No one spoke for a moment.

Goblin. She had named it.

"Goblin," shouted Howard, "Goblin, Goblin, Goblin!"

But Ken was not licked yet. He turned to his mother. He would pretend it was just a word. He would pretend that she hadn't named it.

"Mother, would you think of a name for him?" he pleaded, "something about his being white—and—about his going to be a wonderful race horse—"

"Race horse!" The exclamation was a chorus.

Suddenly Ken's face flamed. He looked at his father. "You said—there might be one gentle one in the lot and you'd have a race horse! And Flicka did get gentle. I gentled her. As gentle as a kitten. You said that too. And then, because of her bad leg, she couldn't be a race horse and it had to be her colt instead of her. And here he is. And he's a horse colt. And he's big and strong. And he's got her blood and her speed. And the speed and spirit of all the Albino's colts. And his mother will teach him manners because she is gentle so he can be schooled and trained for a race horse—he won't be hard to handle even if he has got a white coat from the Albino!"

"The Albino was his great grand-sire," explained Nell to Sargent.

"And Banner's his sire," drawled Sargent. "Now what about all Rob's theories of line breeding? He bred Flicka back to her own sire, and look what he got!"

But Rob was looking at his small son standing there red in the face and with fire in his eye, fighting for his foal! And the anger went out of his heart and a silent cheer was there instead. Good for you, son!

"Name him, Mother," insisted Ken desperately. "Give him a name that will be right for a big winner of races. And something about his being white."

"Cottage cheese!" yelled Howard decidedly, and then, miming about delicately, "or Cream Puff!"

"Pearl of the Harem," joshed Sargent.

"Mooley Cow!" exclaimed Howard and cantered awkwardly across the corral.

"Somebody stop that guy or he'll go on forever," said Rob, making a pass at Howard.

Howard ducked but fell into the arms of Sargent who grabbed him and clapped his hand over his mouth.

Nell had not spoken. Ken watched her. "Mother," he urged her, "go on, mother—"

Sargent let go of Howard who, casting a glance at his father, decided he had gone far enough.

There was an ache in Nell's heart. She looked at the foal—that stubbornness, the mulish head, that stupidity, trying to nurse on every horse in sight, not knowing his own mother; and its anger—it ran across the corral head down, kicking out with one hind leg—it seemed full of hatred.

"Mother!" insisted Ken.

In despair Nell raised her eyes and saw, up behind the line of the green hill, a great thunderhead pushing up into the dark blue of the sky. It was so dazzling white it half blinded her.

"There," she said calmly, "see that? A thunderhead. And it's pure white. We'll call him Thunderhead, Ken—and that's a fine enough name for any race horse."

No one spoke. The silence was like a cool shadow on a hot, dusty day.

Ken stood quiet, feeling weak—the name was so beautiful. Thunderhead. He looked at the great cloud, and turned away so that the others could not see his face. Thunderhead. That would carry the colt to glory. With that name what horse could fail?

The colt, still making little rushes about the corral, kicking and bleating, came up against the group of people by the fence. He had no fear of them. An ordinary colt would have veered away but Colonel Harris got it by the neck and was nipped and let it loose.

Nell put out her hand. The foal careened against her and for a moment its face was hidden and there was darkness—that welcome and familiar darkness of all the long months inside its mother. He pressed closer and stood quiet.

Banner was already rearing and pawing at the gate.

Sitting Bull, waiting for the event, swelling up like a balloon. It must be fourteen months—

"You wait here!" said Ken excitedly when they were all in the corral. "I'll bring them out. They're in the stable."

In a moment the stable door opened, Flicka trotted out, then, for a space, nothing. Flicka turned and looked back and nickered. Still nothing. At last an angry little squeal was heard and Ken appeared, shoving the white foal before him.

Nell was the first to speak. "Why, Kennel!" she exclaimed, "a white colt!"

Charley Sargent found his tongue and with delight in his eyes looked at Rob. "I suppose this is an example of Banner's true breeding. I remember you said, one summer after the other—as like as peas in the pod—"

He turned to Mort Harris and said sadly, "I sure do sympathize most deeply with your bad luck, Mort—Your mare—"

Harris gave a howl and turned and looked in the direction the car and trailer had gone, then seized his head and pretended to tear his hair.

Ken was caught in one of those agonizing moments of life where extravagant hopes and deep despair were somehow reconciled by wishful thinking. Also, he was trying with all his wits to think of a way to suggest to them that this was a happy event. Also, he was on the watch for anything his mother would say, for, from out of her first words, the colt would be named. Also, he must keep his guilty secret.

"Isn't he a beauty?" he cried happily, "and a white horse is good luck, you know. Everybody knows that!"

Rob's face was convulsed. He took his hat off and wiped his forehead.

"My gosh, Ken—" he began, but there was nothing to say.

Flicka nickered again for her baby. It started to run toward her, saw Highboy standing against the fence with reins loosely thrown over a post, and ran to him instead and tried to nurse on him. A shout of amusement and incredulity rose from the spectators. Highboy, annoyed, moved away from the foal, turned around and butted it gently.

The foal stood, bleating, then it ran to Cigarette and tried to nurse on her. Flicka called it unavailingly. When it passed near its mother it seemed to recognize no difference in her from the others.

Nell's face showed horror. "Why—it doesn't know its own mother!"

The foal surged about the corral.

"A white horse is good luck," repeated Ken desperately. "Gus said so. Everybody knows that."

Rob found words at last. "A throwback!" he exclaimed disgust-

Your 1945 Garden

Weed Control Is Best Insurance of Better Gardens

THE primary objective of hoeing or cultivating the Victory garden is weed control. The best time for this weed eradication is as soon after a rain or watering as the ground can be properly worked.

The Victory gardener has three enemies, all ever-zealous to cause the work and time spent in preparing, planting and growing the garden to come to naught. These enemies are weeds, diseases and insects.

Weeds rob the cultivated plants of water, nutrients and even space and light that they require. After each cultivation to eradicate weeds, the surface of the garden should be left in a loose, friable condition so that the soil can absorb later rainfall.

Care must be taken that cultivation be shallow so as to avoid injuring the vegetable plant roots that lie near the surface. And contrary to some opinions, there is little to be gained by hoeing or cultivating the garden often than necessary to keep the weeds out. It appears that a former belief that frequent shallow cultivation during periods of drought was necessary to conserve or bring moisture up to the roots of the plants was a fallacy. At least the USDA is not advocating that kind of cultivation.

Mulching, which has been mentioned in these articles as a conservator of moisture, is also helpful in keeping weeds down. Mulching is necessary only in nonirrigated areas, in periods of long drought where water is not available.

Straw, dried leaves, dried lawn clippings should be applied between the rows and around the plants early, before the soil dries out. Such a mulch is valuable too, around non-staked tomatoes, cucumber and bush squash plants to keep the fruits from contact with the soil, thus keeping the fruits clean and reducing loss from certain rot organisms that are carried in the soil.

When the plant material has been decayed so that it can be easily cut through with a spade, the whole pile should be cut by vertical slices about an inch thick down through all the layers. As the slices fall, they are mixed and should be thrown into another pile for further decomposition.

Decomposition Will Pay Good Dividends

Two or three turnings, as this process is commonly called, will usually give a compost of satisfactory fineness and composition. Compost may aid in growing plants, but it should not be considered as a fertilizer. It is most valuable for improving the physical condition of the soil, filling it with organic matter. It is helpful for growing seedlings, for transplanting, for covering rows of small seeds, for working into the soil that is heavy with clay, or unusually sandy, and it is desirable to apply more of it as a top dressing immediately after seedlings to prevent crust formation and to help keep the soil moist and spongy. The compost pile is well worth the effort of any gardener, who expects to till the same plot of ground for several seasons.

Much has been said and written about scientific farming and scientific gardening. Farming and gardening are essentially arts, not sciences. Much can be learned about gardening and farming, too, by the facts brought to light in the researches of scientists all over the country.

After reading all that has been written, gardening must be learned as other arts are learned by practice and experience, preferably under the guidance of someone who has already acquired the necessary skill and judgment.

In the war against noxious weeds, chemistry offers a new weapon that opens an entirely new approach to environmental pest control in and around orchards and fields. The new material, the active ingredient of which is ammonium sulfamate, has been found to be exceptionally efficient in the destruction of undesirable weeds.

It has also been used successfully in recent experiments at the New Hampshire experiment station to kill the common barberry, the alternate or overwintering host of black stem rust.

Wise Bird Would Have Taken to Its Wings

Having missed his railway connection, a disgruntled soldier spent a miserable hour exploring a dark and dreary town in the pouring rain. Finally he entered a restaurant.

"Wotcha got that's good?" he asked the waitress grumpily.

"Sage hen," she answered.

"What's sage hen?"

"Oh, it's a bird that's shot around here."

"Has it got wings?" asked the soldier.

"Of course it's got wings," the waitress answered sharply.

"Then I don't want any!" snorted the soldier. "I don't want nothing" that has wings and still stays here."

We Bring You Peace

With the coming of V-E day like the burst of sunshiny dawn, the clouds of war in Europe have been drifted and the long awaited sun of peace is shining again.

The roar of cannons, cracking of guns and screams of shells have ceased and Europe is strangely quite after a tribulant six years of war and hate.

But though, peace has come to that portion of the globe, yet what hatreds, greeds and jealousies remain will threaten to become seeds for another conflict a few years hence if they are not stamped out now.

The war has brought out the worst in man's make-up, and bestiality and barbarism manifested by a once highly cultured nation, puts even the most callous savage to shame.

It is a noble thing to pray to God in a thankful spirit that the carnage is past, but just think of the millions of lives lost, the great property damage, the destructions of priceless historical objects,—and all for what? Even now, the very nations which have been longing for peace, now that peace is here, are right back to the old game of quarreling over the spoils of the vanquished.

We can hold conferences by the score with the object to bring about world peace in a diplomatic matter, but this does not accomplish anything as long as man remains in a semi-pagan state.

The only solution for absolute world peace is for all the powers of the world to adopt the Golden Rule as their universal charter and then scrap every instrument of war until the time comes that man refuses to study war no more, or to rise up against his fellow man. Just so long will the world go through the same blood bath it is just experiencing.

Instead of trying to convert the so called heathen people, the churches of the world should join together in a world wide spiritual revival to educate the human race about the follies of war, of the degradation of war and it's utter uselessness. Our so-called untutored savage will stand a better chance in the hereafter because he did not know what we call right and wrong, than will our intelligent race which does know right from wrong and yet persists in the wrong. The only solution for world peace is the Golden Rule "Do unto others as you would have others do unto you."

The above picture, depicting a Christmas scene is symbolic of the first news of Peace—the arrival of the Prince of Peace—to the whole world, which all nations are longing for.

Tinley Servicemen's Letters

April 10, 1945

Dear Folks:

Well I believe its about time I write you again but it isn't so long I was back there for a few days. Before I go any further I want to thank you folks for the stationery you sent me for Easter. I hear the weather has been quite wet there since I left, well it snowed here the day after Easter and today it rained, but in between its been wonderful sunshiny spring weather.

This is some of the stationery you sent me and it came just as I used the last sheet of my supply so I want to thank you very much.

It sure looks good around here now the grass is all green and the trees are budding. The fields of winter wheat are waving in the wind and the farmers are plowing their fields for corn etc.

Haven't been very busy of late, just putting in the time, all we got to do is hope and pray for this war to come to an end. I receive the Tinley Park Times regularly and I wish to inform you of another slight change in address. Just a year ago today I arrived on this base and my address has changed several times but I'm still in the same place.

I remain,

Melvin C. Harcourt

April 6, 1945

Dear Friends:

Just a few lines to leave you know I am well and out of the hospital again. I sure hope I can stay out for awhile now. Sure hope all you folks are well.

I received your lovely Easter gift today and it was greatly appreciated. I want to thank you one and all.

My address has been changed slightly again. We are having some swell spring weather down here in Texas but I'd much rather be spending it up north. I'd like to take this opportunity to say hello to all my friends in Tinley and also all my buddies wherever they may be. Good luck to you all.

Sincerely,

Johnny Lehman

Somewhere in France

Dear Friends:

I want to express gratefulness to you for remembering me at Xmas time. I do appreciate it so much. We are now having lovely weather in this part of France, everything is in full bloom. They say there is nothing quite like Paris in the spring and I do believe it now that I have seen it myself. Thanking you again for your thoughtfulness.

I remain,

Lt. Gladys Mosier ANC

April 9, 1945

Dear Folks:

Just a few lines to thank you for the Easter gift I received, also for sending me the Tinley Times. I really enjoy getting the paper as I like to know what is going on back home. I am very sorry to hear that some of our boys are getting hurt and sure hope for their speedy recovery, it sure is tough that the fellows have to get it like that but maybe it will be over soon at least it looks like it and I hope so.

I've been pretty lucky in getting sent here instead of going to sea, I'll probably be here for a year or so, that is as far as I know. Of course the Navy changes its mind often so a fellow never knows what is what. I'm in pretty good shape though and have no complaints. I've been advanced in rating since here and am now an Aviation Ord 3-c (AOM 3c) my work is very interesting as I get to work on all the Navy's newest aircraft so the time passes fairly fast.

I sure hope all of you folks are O. K. and that I will get to see you all soon. I send my regards to all of you and once again Thanks a lot.

Sincerely,

Kelly Hirsch

P. S. Send me Johnny Gothams address if you will or give it to my mother to send as I would like to write to him.

Orland Servicemen's Letters

Mrs. H. Kruspe, Chairman

Philippine Islands
April 2, 1945

Dear Mrs. Kruspe:

I want to take the time to drop you a line, to thank you for the Xmas box. I got it about a week ago and it was a very welcome box. It lasted just long enough to get the wrappings off. The fellows that shared it want to send their thanks also. None of the men in my company ever heard of an organization like yours, that sends boxes to the fellows in service.

Orland Park will sure look good to me when I get back. Its pretty rough going out here sometimes, but it could be worse. I felt pretty bad, when I got the bad news about Harold Kay. I wanted to see him, but we were pretty busy after we landed and I didn't get to see him, although I found out later that at one time he was only about a block away.

I've got two copies of the Orland

Herald since I've been here and they were very welcome. Well I guess I'll ring off now and thanks a million for the Xmas box.

Best Wishes,
(Sgt.) Albert Wheeler

April 22, 1945

Dear Mr. Semmler:

I will appreciate your publishing this note at your convenience.

I wish to thank all those friends who mailed Christmas packages to me. I only regret that I can't thank all of them individually but rather than have them term me ungrateful I'll have to do a little explaining in this letter.

Our packages were greatly delayed this year. In fact a few have just started coming in now. Many of those are so damaged that our mail man has to throw them in the rubbish heap as he can't make out to whom they were addressed. So naturally I don't expect to receive most of the remembrances sent to me this past Xmas. I do want all of you good people to know that "the boys over seas" appreciate all your efforts to bring home a little closer to us.

I hope to be home soon after having seen a lot of country. The Philippines at present, There's no place like home. I've definitely become a very ardent booster of Orland Park and I can imagine that many more of the fellows feel the same way.

Will close now hoping your Orland Park Herald carries the banner headline in the near future.

Sincerely,

Wooded Estates

159th and Wolf Road News
By Mrs. Robert Roth

V-E Day, long awaited, has finally come. The proud, arrogant German army which five years ago, set out to conquer the world, has been crushed into humiliating defeat by a combination of military and naval forces such as the world has never seen.

Under the able leadership of Gen. Eisenhower, the American portion of these forces, were primary contributors towards this crushing defeat and ultimate unconditional surrender. These forces are composed of young men, who only a few years ago, were playing around the neighborhood —boys, who with only the knowledge that they were right, and a short training period behind them, went out and defeated an army which has been preparing for war for over 20 years.

We of Wooded Estates are proud of those boys, and of the job they are doing. We are proud also, of our citizens, who realizing that V-E Day is only a half-way mark and that there is a long tough fight ahead, went to their essential jobs with an increased determination that there can be no complete victory until the fanatical forces of Japan are crushed into the very soil that is the Japanese Empire.

So fight on, continue buying bonds, and hasten V-J Day and complete Victory, a day when the service man and civilian alike, will have good cause for celebration.

New Lenox Boy Sends Record Of Battleship

Dolores Anderson

A NEWSPAPER RELEASE telling the record of the BATTLESHIP "TENNESSEE," sent by Forest D. Slick Seaman 1-c, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jeremiah Slick of New Lenox, who is aboard the U.S.S. TENNESSEE.

WASHINGTON, March 24—(I.N.S.)—The Navy Department today made public the war record of the Battleship TENNESSEE, which was damaged in the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, but has since taken part in operations from the Aleutians to Iwo Jima, firing 135,000 projectiles at the enemy.

Built during World War I, the 32,300 ton TENNESSEE was not completed in time to take part in that conflict.

At Pearl Harbor, December 7, 1941, the TENNESSEE was under the command of Capt. Charles E. Reordan of Dallas, Texas. The ship sustained two bomb hits, but casualties were relatively light.

Got Four Bombers

During the Pearl Harbor battle, anti-aircraft batteries of the TENNESSEE shot down four Japanese bombers.

In June, 1942, Captain (now Commodore) Robert S. Haggert of Salem, N. Y. took command of the TENNESSEE and proceeded with her to the Aleutians, where the battleship took part in attacks preparatory to the recapture of Kiska.

Later the TENNESSEE participated in the operations leading to the capture of Tarawa, Kwajalein, Eniwetok, Saipan, Tinian, Guam, and the Palaus.

During the Philippines campaign the TENNESSEE furnished gunfire support for the landings on Leyte and for several days provided protection for transports which were unloading on the beach.

She later participated in the battle for Leyte Gulf, forming part of a force which destroyed two Japanese battleships, two cruisers and four destroyers in Surigao Strait.

Fought At Iwo

At Iwo Jima, the vessel was under the command of Capt. John B. Hefnerman of Washington, Ind.

In the report to the Navy Department on the activities of the TENNESSEE from August 1, 1943, to August 1, 1944, the ships former commanding officer, Capt. Andrew D. Mayer, stated the TENNESSEE steamed 90,384 miles during the year.

Captain Mayer, who was shipper of the TENNESSEE from March 26 1944, to October 10, 1944, reported the ship during that period fired 5,791 fourteen inch shells, 32, 121 five inch shells, 97,883 40 millimeter projectiles at the Japs.

While taking part in the South Pacific operations in March, 1944 the TENNESSEE was hit by fragments from bursting Japanese shells at Kavieng.

At Saipan she was struck by three shells from battery on Tinian. Eight men were killed and 24 others were wounded. During the Guam landing she was straddled by Japanese shore

Dear Mrs. McMillan:

Yes I know, I should be ashamed of myself for not writing more often to those back home who are doing so much to let us know that we haven't been forgotten but I have no alibi.

Your birthday greetings arrived and believe me it made me very happy to learn that I was again remembered by the M. W. S. C., will you please thank all of them for me not only for the card and money order but for the kind thought too.

Tonite Berlin has been surrounded and all of our Armies make large gains, doesn't seem possible that the war can continue much longer in these parts but one just can't let himself become too optimistic right now. There is nothing worthwhile left in Germany what they expect to gain by continuing is beyond me, but one thing I'm sure of is that they are getting just what they deserve for the crimes and treatment of our boys and the prisoners, no doubt, the papers back home published some of the pictures of these crimes.

The end of another day is drawing close so I had better be getting back to my billets, so until next time best of health and wishes to all of you and thanks again for the kind remembrance.

As ever,

The roar of battle has died in Europe and the Allied nations have been victorious over a foe who would have forbidden freedom in any sense.

We are aware of the grave responsibilities that lie ahead of us for the rehabilitation of a war-torn continent.

No less, are we aware, that there remains another step before we may claim a complete victory.

With undaunted faith we continue the good work so well begun . . . Working together the world shall be made safe for all freedom-loving people.

FOR VICTORY

Just as in 1776, the bells of Freedom have rung out for a new victory for liberty-loving people everywhere.

It is not enough that we be free and we have been fighting so that all people of the world may be equally free.

In liberty there is that which leads to achievement... and to a better world.

We have struggled for months so that all mankind may enjoy our freedom and that struggle has resulted in a noble victory over evil forces.

And yet we will continue to struggle until all people, everywhere, shall be freed from the nations that would enslave them.

Off The Run-way

Civil Air Patrol Squadron 613-3
2nd Lt. Erlyne Conel

Midnight Sunday, April 29th following the big Civil Air Patrol Recruiting Drive Air Show at Rubinkam Airport, a week ago Sunday.

If you were a spectator a week ago Sunday you know how exciting everything was... how exhilarating it was to be out all day in the open... and you can probably realize how tired and sleepy I am trying to meet tonight's deadline for this column.

Sitting here before my typewriter and reviewing the happenings—it seems amazing that with the tremendous amount of action—the large number of planes on the field at one time—with all the people involved—pilots performing every acrobatic precision stunt in the book—there was NOT THE SLIGHTEST MISHAP! This experience again proves the safety of flight. For certainly if such a record can be chalked up during a thrilling air show—it can be more than equaled during normal flight.

Actually—the show began for me Sunday morning at 11:13 O'clock when I checked and at Rubinkam as a contestant in the 75 mile cross-country "Power Puff Derby" for women flyers only. At 1 p.m. I returned after landing at Joliet and Kankakee Airports, while circling Rubinkam for my finish-line landing. I noticed approximately forty planes were about to take off for the Aerial Review just starting. The "Powder Puff" winner was one of Chicago-Land's outstanding women flyers Helen Budwash. I dip my wings in salute to her.

By this time—it was noticeable that the crowd was growing to amazing proportions. At its peak it was estimated that between ten and twelve thousand people were witnessing the events. During the afternoon, as Public Relations Officer, it was my privilege to welcome distinguished visitors: Major E. L. Mastertown, Commander of Group 613, and his Staff Officers, who greeted the crowd over the mike; Capt. Joe E. Day, of Camp Sauganash; Capt. MacAfee; Mr. Hall, of Skyways Magazine, and his daughter, Nancy, who enjoyed her very first plane ride, Lt. Ed. Prosperi, Manager of Prosperi Airport, and many others.

All afternoon the sky brought to mind a comparison with a three-ring circus. There was so much activity it was often difficult to see it all at once. Special mention should be made of the Aerial Acrobats—and especially those from other Squadrons who helped to make the show a success. Squadron 613-3 thanks Lt. Fred Case, Lt. Conway Bird, W-O Danny Kladis from Squadron 613-7 and F-O Charles Compton of Squadron 613-1. Thanks also is extended to the woman Instructress from our neighboring airfield, beautiful Ty Barnes Cassidy. She performed snap roll at an altitude of 250 feet! and THAT brings forth the admiration and respect of every flyer!

The twin parachute jumps were made by W-O Danny Kladis of Squadron 613-7 and our own W-O Floyd Orrington... Congratulations, W-O Floyd on your FIRST jump! And, Congratulations to you, W-O Kladis, not only on your jump—but also on becoming the father of twin girls very recently. Mike Burson's delayed parachute jump falling approximately 1500 feet through the sky—before pulling the rip-cord—was a thriller-diller!

Everyone interested in joining Civil Air Patrol... either as a Senior or Cadet member, should contact Lt. Walter Wolak, 17549 So. 66th St. Tinley Park, Illinois, phone Tinley Park 347, or any member of Squadron 613-3. Ask for more details. Join today. In behalf of every member of Squadron 613-3—I would like to thank everyone who came. You were a grand audience!

Ideas for Meat-Scarce Days...

Pan-broil wide, thinly sliced circles of ground beef. Top each with a poached egg, and serve with hot biscuits.

Serve meat-stretching meat stews with well-seasoned macaroni, noodles, or spaghetti instead of the usual potatoes.

For tasty meat shortcakes split corn muffins or biscuits in half; spread with margarine. Cream chipped beef or left-over ham—and spread between layers and on top of biscuits.

Try soon! Heat large bologna slices (¼ thick) in fat 'til edges curl into cups. Fill with baked beans—serve with coleslaw and piping hot cornbread.

VICTORY for PEACE

Victory has come and we can now understand in greater measure than ever, the wise words of Washington.

It is with hearts full of gratitude that we give thanks for this Victory which serves us with a deep responsibility to help make an everlasting peace that may be enjoyed by all people, everywhere.

The first step has been successful... No less successful shall be the second and final step in preparing the world for a peaceful future.

THE CONGRESSIONAL FRONT ABROAD

By Congressman Everett M. Dirksen
16th Illinois district

GREETINGS

Greetings to the home folks. This issue of the Congressional Front comes from Jerusalem in the Holy Land. There has been opportunity to attend Easter Services at the Church of the Holy Sepulchre and visit some of the interesting places that are found in the very cradle of Christianity. Palestine has become the favorite place for soldiers on furlough. The weather is ideal. The city of Tel Aviv is one of the most modern up to date places in the whole Middle East. There are so many things to see. One can easily understand why men in uniform like to find respite here.

A REPORT

My journey is about two thirds complete from the standpoint of distance and time. A brief, interim report would, therefore, be quite in order. You will remember that the purpose of this overseas trip was to inspect American operations abroad and make a report to both Congress and Country on the efficiency and economy of the expenditure of public money. Thus far I've travelled about 16,000 miles by plane; 2,000 miles by rail-road, and about 500 miles by car. To take advantage of good flying weather, I thought it advisable to go to the end of the journey and work back to Europe. As a result, there have been very few interruptions in the original schedule and I've managed to get over England, Ceylon, India, Iraq, Iran, Northern Africa and am now enroute to Syria, Turkey, Italy and France.

THINGS SEEN

In pursuing the official assignment as a one man subcommittee of the Appropriations Committee of Congress, I've made a special point of visiting hospitals; inspecting food supplies and canteens, talking to officers and enlisted men everywhere; inspecting airports and camps, examining the operations of war agencies such as War Information, Lend Lease, War Shipping, Strategic Services and others. In addition, there has been abundant chance to note the staffing and facilities of our consular and diplomatic offices abroad. This has been a most fruitful and informative experience. In addition, the trip furnished an opportunity to talk with leaders who are shaping policies in some of the troubled political areas of the world with which the United Nations must ultimately deal.

I sell the hybrid with an outstanding yield record in this territory; that stands up when inferior corn gives way to weather, insects and disease; that produces feeding quality corn.

Let me specify a "G" Hybrid for your farm.

PEOPLE

In the course of the trip I've visited with thousands of G.I.s and officers. This included Lord Mountbatten and Lt. General Wheeler and Sultan, Major General Giles, Covell, Evans, Stratemeyer and many others. The civilian list includes the Viceroy of India, the leaders of the Moslem, Indian and Untouchable groups, the Governor of Bengal, the Prime Minister of Iraq, the Ameen of Trans Jordan, our Consuls, Ministers and Ambassadors and many more.

MOST DRAMATIC EXPERIENCE

Most dramatic experience of the trip was to set down in the middle East desert about 250 miles from the nearest habitation of any consequence and find a First Lieutenant and ten enlisted men pursuing their jobs with courage and unflinching morale. They were surprised to see a Congressman in such an out of the way post. My visit with them was a stimulating affair.

WHAT DO I THINK

Let me set down but two brief conclusions at this time. First, let it be said that we can be proud of our military and civil forces abroad. They meet every great tradition of our country. Secondly, after seeing many lands, one can sing with joyous abandon "God Has Blessed America." We have a responsibility.

Out of the cannon's mouth has roared the righteous demand for Victory . . . A demand based on the true principles of liberty for all people everywhere.

We have been victorious over part of the Axis . . . and as we help re-establish peace let us bend every effort to bring total liberty to a peace-hungry universe.

That is why it is eliminating curves and grades wherever possible; smoothing and straightening the way for the high-speed passenger and freight trains America demands today. That is better railroading!

Many track leveling and straightening projects are already completed, others are in progress, and still many more are planned. This continual activity, throughout the 14 states it serves, is part of ROCK ISLAND'S Program of Planned Progress.

Thus, ROCK ISLAND is doing a better war job... right now... putting traffic over its lines faster and in greater volume. And will be ready for the peacetime era when fine, fast transportation will carry the people and haul the goods to make America's future safe and secure, for...

WHEN this war is over, and the expected boom in every form of sport comes along, there is certain to be a big need for much stronger supervision than we have today. This includes baseball, racing, football, boxing and basketball above most of the others. For these are the major spectator and big money games.

This isn't a matter of today or next week or next month. It is a matter of the big tangle and scramble that is coming after the war is over when there will be almost countless problems to face and handle, including the return home of millions of servicemen, many of these hoping and expecting to make a living out of professional sport.

You can see what happened when three or four unknown basketball players, in a New York college almost totally unknown in a national way, almost wrecked basketball. You can figure what will happen if the same thing occurs to baseball, boxing, racing and football on a bigger scale.

Four Big Sports

We can take them up in order: Baseball—In my opinion, baseball needs a ruling commissioner who will be given full authority to act; who will be well known and respected around the country; who can pick up where Judge Landis left off. A commissioner without these qualifications, without complete authority, would be useless. It will be too late in case some scandal breaks. Baseball can't look for any such supporting combination as Judge Landis and Babe Ruth to restore public confidence.

Racing—Racing is a tougher problem to tackle, due to the jealousies of competing states and the tremendous taxes they gather in. Yet it is a well-known fact that even before racing was stopped, many chiselers, crooks and gangsters were edging their way into the richest financial harvest of all sport, where well over a billion dollars was bet through 1944. Where more than a few jockeys were not above suspicion and where general larceny was on the verge of breaking out at any moment. This applies to all racing states.

Only a J. Edgar Hoover could help here, where an annual salary of $100,000 would be excellent insurance. It would take a direct order from Washington to bring this about. But it might be badly needed at any given time later on.

Pro Football and Boxing

Football—It would be almost impossible to have any ruling commissioner for college football, as so many sections have their own commissioners who have different and conflicting ideals and opinions.

But pro football faces as many problems as any sport. For one thing, there is the probability of at least one rival league. Beyond that is the problem of many returning stars, who still have a year or two years of college play left. Any number of these will decide to play pro football and leave their college careers to the bosky dell.

This can not only bring about open warfare between pro leagues, but also a civil football war between the colleges and the pros. It can also lead to any number of scandals.

Boxing—Here is one of sport's greatest needs. Boxing, like racing, has been largely a matter of state regulation. As it is, we have no real boxing control. Champions in one state may be thrown out in another. Boxing and racing are the easiest contests to throw, with more money involved in the throwing. Especially in the general direction of the gamblers—and I mean the crooked gamblers. Boxing needs a commissioner or a supervisor more than any other single sport. And it may need more very badly later on, much more than it needs one at the moment.

I have only mentioned four of the major public sports—baseball, racing, football and boxing. In each instance they all need a commissioner who is nationally known, who has the respect of the country at large, who has both honesty and proved ability, and who will also be given possession of "the iron hand," when the iron hand is needed. Any form of figurehead or front man would be a useless undertaking.

Bob Feller Returns

Now that he is back in the states, Bob Feller will be allowed to pitch for his Great Lakes team after two or more years service in the South Pacific. Feller deserves his break at Great Lakes, after a fine war record. He has had little chance to get any active pitching since he won 25 games for Cleveland in 1941, striking out 260 hitters. A lot of rust can develop in that time, but he will have the chance now to iron out a few kinks.

Science Develops Aids for Farmers

Crop and Livestock Improvements Seen

CONTINUED high production levels on American farms in 1945 should be materially aided by recent discoveries and developments by U. S. department of agriculture research experts.

Some of the announced results of the Agricultural Research administration's program are:

1. Release of 43 new improved varieties of plants; such as corn hybrids, suitable to the South. Hybrid corn has been little used there so far, but the new variety shows promise of bigger acre yield increases than in the North. Hybrid onions give evidence of increasing yields per acre, as much as 20 to 50 per cent.
2. Working out of methods for conditioning and treating ammonium nitrate, so that it can be readily used as a high-nitrogen fertilizer.
3. Confirmation by tests with DD (dichloropropylene - dichloropropane) of earlier reports that it is highly effective against the rootknot nematode.
4. Development of a mechanism for dispersal of insecticidal sprays by airplane.
5. Production of new allyl compounds, from ordinary sugars and starches, that form clear, weather-resistant coatings for wood, paper, or metal.
6. Development of a dual-stretch method which improves the physical properties of cord made from cotton fiber, the result of research on tire cord.
7. Extension of the use of phenothiazine as a drug for livestock. Research has shown that it can be safely used for calves, and that wormy sheep taking regular small doses in their salt, show improvement from the medication.

Better Production

cal properties of cord made from cotton fiber, the result of research on tire cord.

Postwar Locker Plant Expansion Promised

Model Locker Plants Increase.

As a result of prewar as well as successful wartime experience of farmers who have used frozen food lockers for quick freezing and storing of their surplus food supplies, a broad increase in construction of locker plants in farming communities is expected after the war, according to the National Frozen Food Locker association.

The frozen food locker industry, now operating more than two million individual storage units, serves one-fourth of America's farm families, and is making plans for further expansion.

Rental of lockers, in many cases, is far below the cost for low temperature refrigeration installed by individual farmers. Tests have proven that the quality of meats, fruits and vegetables can be maintained by properly regulated locker plants.

Not only do locker plants serve as a storage place for the needs of the farmer, but it is possible for him to develop a select retail trade, selling in winter direct from his locker supply.

TELEFACT

Man About Town:

San Franciscans are talking about: The more than 200 G-Men (not including the numerous state department confidential agents and New York City, Chicago, New Orleans, etc., ace detectives) to guard the delegates and diplomats. The Big City "dicks" are assigned to spot well-known pickpockets, "dips," rogues galleryites and "cannons"—as big-time crooks are called by the gendarmes. . . . The heaviest protection is for Russia's Mr. Molotov. . . . As one John Edgar Hoover man put it: "He'll be guarded by nearly 200 Russian secret servicemen so an FBI agent won't get within 200 yards of him."

FDR's pal, Charlie Michelson (he was 75 the other day), raising eyebrows with the prediction: "Mayor LaGuardia may be the Democratic nominee for governor of N. Y." . . . John Metcalfe, the Washington correspondent, here for a New York Gazette. He's finishing a book called "Tin Cup Diplomacy," which will please the underpaid working in our state department. . . . The return of Joe Rosenthal (this is his home burg). Joe is the AP hocus-focuser who took that wonderful picture of the flag being planted on Iwo Jima. . . . Kent Cooper, the AP boss, is offering reproductions of the famed photo at $1—the profits to go to the Marines via Navy Relief.

WALTER WINCHELL IN SAN FRANCISCO

The renowned rivalry between Los Angeles and the San Francisco correspondents, which George Polk carries on from his Washington beat for his L. A. paper. George won't refer to it as the San Francisco conference. He calls it the California conference. . . . The "real reason" Cong. Clare Luce returned to Italy. They say she wrote a book there in which she does "a job" on Edda Mussolini.

Mike McDermott, the popular special ass't to Sec'y of Statetenius. He arranged hotel rooms for over 900 newspaper men, newsreel cameramen, columnists and radio prima donnas and then wound up with no "decent" space in which to sleep himself. . . . The musical show, "Watch Out Angel," which folded at the Curran theater Satdee night after a three-week run. Too bad. Some of the score was very good and several people in it are talented. . . . The Alcazar theater renamed the United Nations theater. Its new marquee was arranged via the War Production board—via request of the state department. Glenn Allvine of the Will Hays zoo is in charge. The Hollywood films there will be changed daily for the delegates. "Going My Way," frixample, will be heard in Czech for the Czechs. In Portuguese for the Brazilians, etc.

Jack's for Big Town food, better than most spots in New York. . . . The two Stork clubs. And S. Billingsley can't do a thing about the name piracy, either. You'll Be Sorry

LAURA was in a hurry. Having lost her part-time maid to a war plant some months before, she really had to hustle when she planned to be away all day. And now she was due at the hospital.

She made a last-minute checkup before pulling on her gloves. The table was set for dinner though it was only nine o'clock in the morning; salad greens were crisping in the refrigerator; the casserole and biscuits were ready to be popped into the oven when she returned.

Laura locked up, glanced at her watch and wished her big, old-fashioned house were a bit nearer the bus line. As near as Mrs. Farnham's modern bungalow.

Mrs. Farnham hadn't come to the hospital on her regular day last week and Laura wondered why. As she passed the bungalow, a mere half block from the bus, she instinctively glanced toward the porch—just in time to see Mrs. Farnham skid on a bar of soap and upset a pail of water.

Laura repressed a wicked urge to laugh. There was something funny about the stout matron's dignity being diluted in the puddle. But maybe she was hurt. Laura dashed up the steps and was relieved to find that the lady's pride had suffered most.

"You'll be all right when you've changed into something dry," Laura consoled as she helped the sputtering woman into the house. "Look here, I've just missed my bus anyway, so why don't you take off those wet clothes while I hunt up your robe."

"Robe!" Mrs. Farnham snorted. "I've got to get into another house-dress and finish scrubbing that darned porch."

"Oh. Is your cleaning woman on vacation?"

"Vacation!" the indignant woman barked. "It'll be a permanent one so far as I'm concerned. She took advantage of the present shortage of domestics. I engaged her by the hour and she slowed down until I was paying her more for less work." She tossed the dripping garment on a chair and finished explosively, "I fired her!"

"You'll find someone else," Laura said soothingly.

"Not a chance. By the way, Laura, tell the hospital I won't be in for my weekly stint any more. I'll be too busy at home."

"Nonsense," Laura said a trifle sharply. "I've been without help for months and I manage to do my bit. Of course there won't be much spare time when the children get back from camp and I have fall cleaning to—"

"Exactly, Laura. Simply tell Miss Tully you can't make it any more or you'll regret it."

Laura enjoyed waiting on people. Consequently she had a field day at the hospital. Sick people needed a certain amount of pampering and she was just the one to serve it up—in big gobs.

Today Miss Tully assigned her to the second floor. Fresh water for the feverish lady in 204; plumped pillows for that restless young patient in Ward 3; and that woman in the corner seemed to need attention of some sort. She was middle-aged and her soft brown eyes were worried.

"You're lucky to be near the window," Laura said cheerfully as she smoothed the cotton spread. "Are you well enough to sit up?"

The woman nodded her graying head and smiled faintly. "Oh, yes. I'm just about as good as new, the doctor says. I'll be leaving in a few days." The smile disappeared and she bit her lip.

"I suppose your family can't wait till you're home again."

The woman's brooding eyes lifted to meet Laura's interested gaze. "My family is—my son." Her voice broke and then she said proudly, "Jim's a paratrooper, he is. He don't know I'm here; didn't want to worry him. But—" she reached into the drawer of her bedside stand and took out a telegram. "It says here he's coming home on furlough."

"Jim's coming home tonight and I can't bear to think he'll be alone, getting his own meals out of cans when he was counting so much on home-cooked food. Those things mean so much to a boy, you know."

Laura did know. Moreover, she knew what to do about it. With the children away there was plenty of room. Jim would be welcome at her home. Her husband would enjoy swapping yarns with a paratrooper who had seen action in France.

"And that's not all," Laura finished. "When you leave here I want you to stay with us until you are strong again. It'll boost Jim's morale to know you're having good care."

A few weeks later Laura was hailed by Mrs. Farnham, who was on the porch brushing sofa cushions. She waved the brush with a condescending gesture. "On your way to the hospital again, Laura?" she sang out. "How do you ever manage?"

Laura waved back airily. "Simple, my dear. I met a very nice person named Mrs. Murphy at the hospital. After she recovered from her operation she needed a job to replace the one from which you fired her. Now that she's well, she accomplishes a lot—"

SNAPPY FACTS

RUBBER

In 1942, our first year at war, 4 1/2% of the rubber consumed in the U. S. was synthetic; in 1943, 35%, and in 1944 80%. At the present time, more than 85% is synthetic.

The synthetic rubber industry is using soap at the rate of 100,000,000 pounds a year—enough to cover the needs of the population of Chicago for one year.

A new kind of synthetic rubber has been developed from lactic acid (buttermilk).

The B. F. Goodrich Company has made experimental tires of rubber produced from kok-saghyz, the Russian dandelion.

Waiting for a Surge?

You may have heard that the reason why you have to wait for a Surge is because we can't make very many of them.

That's all wrong. During the past year we have been making more Surges than ever before.

It's not because we are not making a lot of them—it's because a lot of people like the Surge and won't be satisfied with anything else.

Phones on Street Cars Connect Crew, Dispatchers

Two-way radio telephones are now used by 13 street-railway companies for communication between the dispatcher's office and supervisory motorcars and emergency trucks, says Collier's.

A new device, used in conjunction with such systems, automatically records the exact time each streetcar passes a number of successive points spaced along its route. With it, a dispatcher can see at once when and where a particular car is behind schedule or stopped by an accident and can then radio the nearest supervisory car to make an investigation.

A UNITED VICTORY

In every corner of the Globe where freedom-loving people are . . . on the far-flung battle-fronts and on the home front . . . a Victory for humanity is proclaimed.

The United Nations have made another Victory on the road to world-wide peace.

We pause in thanksgiving to do honor to those who have so willingly and with such great sacrifice made this possible.

"Where Freeman Shall Stand..."

Hail to the men and women of the armed forces who, marching together, have given us a new lease on freedom.

These young Americans have fought to keep a way of life, founded on Liberty and Equality . . . Our faith in them and their faith in these ideals, and the complete unity of American purpose in every effort, together with unselfish sacrifice, has kept America free.

Back of the battle lines has stood a united people . . . A people determined to let nothing stand in the way of victory.

Together with our allies, American youth has again made the world secure for freedom . . . Another victory is won . . . The final phase shall find a complete and total victory for liberty-loving people everywhere.

FROM EVERY ANGLE

WITHOUT THESE BASIC FEATURES
NO MACHINE QUALIFIES AS AN ALL-PURPOSE FARM TRACTOR

A SHORT TURNING RADIUS
is vital for row-crop farming. Farmalls turn in 7 to 9 feet. Tricycle design, and individual wheel brakes that enable tractor to pivot on either rear wheel, are indispensable features.

FARMALLS HAVE AMPLE
clearance for cultivating a large variety of crops. Rear wheel treads can be set to accommodate practically any row spacings. On every job the operator has a clear view of the work he is doing.

FARMALLS ARE FIRST

ANY MAN WHO BUYS A TRACTOR buys it for one big reason: the work the tractor will do. The quality of work, the volume, and the variety are the real measures of tractor value. Couple these factors with original cost, plus upkeep and operation, and you have the whole story.

That's the way most farmers figure it out when they make this important investment. The answer has turned out to be a Farmall tractor more times than all other makes combined.

That doesn't happen by chance. It happens because these famous red tractors are designed and built to do more work, better work, and a bigger variety of work per dollar of cost than anything else on wheels.

At the right are a few basic reasons behind Farmall tractor performance. We will be glad to demonstrate how Farmalls, with their complete line of related tools and machines, make up the most efficient system of power farming in existence.

Those are the big things to remember when you plan the purchase of farm power equipment. Word from the factory tells us that with all possible manufacturing speed, THE FARMALLS ARE COMING!

THE TOP TRACTORS FOR ALL FARMS

THERE IS NO SUBSTITUTE
for the Farmall's versatility. It is built to operate with the greatest variety of quick-attachable implements ever known. The hydraulic "Lift-All" provides easy implement control.

FARMALL'S POWERFUL
engine gives you record-breaking fuel economy. Correct gear ratios transfer maximum engine power to the drawbar. This is the secret of Farmall's low fuel consumption. A variable-speed governor controls all operating speeds. Oil and air cleaners and dirt seals insure long wear. The power take-off and belt pulley complete the Farmall's unbeatable utility as an all-purpose farm power unit.
